Our Mission

To improve the quality of life of all
British Columbians through the growth and stewardship of funds that support volunteerism and the work of charitable organizations in strengthening the communities they serve.

2004: A Year of Giving Back

Since its establishment in 1943, Vancouver Foundation has made more than $530,000,000 in grants and distributions to community organizations throughout British Columbia.

The investment return for the Consolidated Trust Fund for the year ending December 31, 2004 was 8.4% (page 19).

Vancouver Foundation established 55 new endowment funds in 2004—more than in any other year.

Unrestricted funds and donations have a wide-ranging community impact. In 2004, unrestricted donations increased significantly from the previous year—from $398,000 to more than $4.9 million. The flexibility and broad purposes of unrestricted donations allow Vancouver Foundation to respond strategically to opportunities and community needs as they arise.

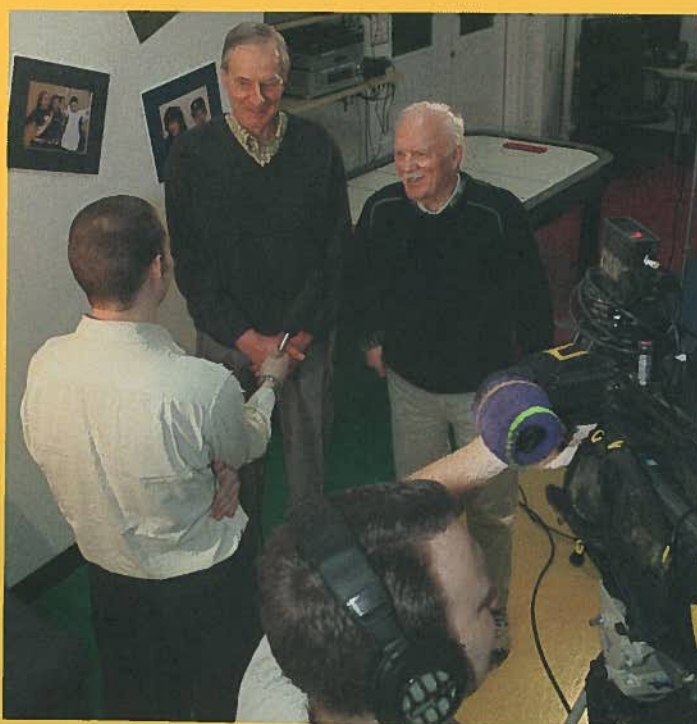

Several communications initiatives were shaped over the past year to raise Vancouver Foundation's profile and promote the non-for-profit sector. Two of these include:

- CARING FOR COMMUNITIES, a television series focussing on Vancouver Foundation and produced in partnership with Shaw Cable and Cause & Effect Communications. In April 2005, Caring for Communities will run on the Shaw network, providing a voice for charitable organizations and giving well-deserved recognition to individuals who are making their communities better places to live.
- The GIFT OF COMMUNICATION, a joint initiative between Vancouver Foundation and CBC Television, is designed to provide communication tools and expertise to organizations with which Vancouver Foundation has a current granting relationship. Each Gift of Communication will result in a three to five minute video production for use by an organization to tell their story and how they are making a positive impact.

In 2004, the Vancouver Sun Children's Fund, established with Vancouver Foundation in 1981, transferred administration of the Fund's granting program to the Foundation. The expert volunteers who sit on the Children, Youth and Families Advisory Committee draw upon their in-depth knowledge of community issues and needs to award grants from the Fund to organizations assisting children across the province.

In November, 120 individuals from BC communities, not-for-profit and government agencies gathered at Simon Fraser University's Morris J. Wosk Centre for a Dialogue on Rural - Urban Interdependence in British Columbia (page 15).

In 2003, Vancouver Foundation "seeded" the Four Pillars Fund with a contribution of $250,000. A partnership between the City of Vancouver, Western Economic Diversification Canada and VanCity Credit Union, the Four Pillars Fund encourages community projects that enhance the lives of people suffering from problematic substance abuse.

At the inaugural meeting of the Fund's Advisory Committee in June 2004, the first grant was approved; an Honourary Board co-chaired by former Vancouver Mayor Philip Owen and John deC. Evans was established to set direction and raise awareness for the Fund; and more than $90,000 in donations was received. (page 23 for Advisory Committee and Honourary Board names) (page 13 for highlight)

Every year in British Columbia, money and other types of property goes unclaimed. In 2003, the provincial government transferred administration of their unclaimed property program to the British Columbia Unclaimed Property Society (BCUPS), which strives to reunite rightful owners with their assets. Each year, a portion of unclaimed funds held by BCUPS is transferred to Vancouver Foundation for distribution into communities across the province. In 2004, $1,000,000 was transferred to Vancouver Foundation for its grant-making programs.

Visit www.bcupsonlineproperty.bc.ca to find a searchable database of unclaimed funds held by BCUPS.

In June, Vancouver Foundation established the Research Ethics Board (REB) for community-based research in British Columbia. The REB supports our community-based Health Research Program by ensuring that funded projects conform to the highest ethical standards. Organizations and Aboriginal communities across the province can now identify local health research priorities for themselves and move these forward. The first formal review meeting was held in December.

Vancouver Foundation understands the essential link between the development of healthy, sustainable local organizations and the building of strong communities. In 2004, the Foundation was a key contributor to the development and operations of the Centre for Sustainability, and continued its long standing support of Partners in Organizational Development (POD) technical assistance programs. With this investment, Vancouver Foundation is helping to ensure that not-for-profit organizations across BC can develop the organizational capacity they need to serve their communities well.

Giving Back to Communities

It's within all of us - the power to dream, to share, to make our community a better place.

For over 60 years, Vancouver Foundation donors have embraced this notion, and in the process, have given back through the establishment of philanthropic legacies that provide critical support to the charitable sector and make a positive impact on the lives of thousands of British Columbians each and every day.

Last year, the generosity of our donors enabled Vancouver Foundation to distribute nearly $30 million in grants to assist charitable organizations across the province. We also experienced a dramatic increase in donations to Unrestricted and Field of Interest funds - from $397,000 in 2003 to $5 million in 2004. The flexibility and broad purposes of these gifts have further enhanced our ability to direct support to where it is most needed in the community.

We are always searching for new ways to respond to donors and to help them achieve their charitable dreams. In 2004, Vancouver Foundation introduced three new fund types, Pay Down (Annuity) Funds, Retractable Funds (for agencies) and Private Funds. We also established an Investment Manager's Program that gives donors the ability to establish a fund with Vancouver Foundation while having their own investment advisor manage the capital. As we developed these initiatives, we were fortunate to be able to call upon our legal counsel, Fasken Martineau DuMoulin LLP, for valued legal expertise in these matters.

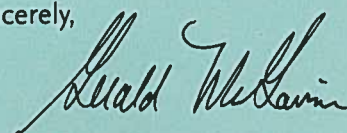

Vancouver Foundation prides itself in the relationships it has developed with not-for-profit organizations, corporations and governments who often call upon us to assist them with their philanthropic and community programs. Most recently, our demonstrated stewardship and grantmaking skills were, once again, enlisted by the provincial government leading to the creation of the BC Arts Renaissance Fund, a $25 million endowment and development fund to support arts and culture organizations. By matching money raised by the arts community to build endowment funds, this exciting new initiative will help generate secure sources of permanent revenue to ensure long-term stability and new opportunities for BC's arts and culture organizations.

Our record of stewardship over the years is testament to the generosity of our donors and to the many volunteers who work hard to make Vancouver Foundation a leader in philanthropy and community development. Over the past year, more than 150 volunteers from across the province contributed countless hours of their time and expertise, enhancing the work of the Foundation in the process. On behalf of the Board of Directors, I thank Hamish Angus for his time on the Board, and welcome the impressive strengths that new Directors Diana Maughan, Robert Fairweather and Derral Moriyama bring to our team. And, of course, tremendous thanks to Richard Mulcaster, who stepped down as President and CEO after 25 years of distinguished service with Vancouver Foundation.

Improved investment markets plus some judicious changes by our Investment Committee brought a second year of positive returns (8.4%) in 2004. Today, Vancouver Foundation manages 900 permanent endowment funds worth $600 million, securing our place as the largest community foundation in Canada and ensuring that we can continue giving back to communities across British Columbia for generations to come.

Sincerely,

Gerald A.B. McGavin, CM, FCA, Chair

A Philanthropic Leader Steps Down

In December 2004, Richard Mulcaster stepped down as President and CEO of Vancouver Foundation. For 25 years, his name has been synonymous with Canadian philanthropy and the largest community foundation in Canada.

"I spent nearly half of my life with Vancouver Foundation and enjoyed every minute of it," says Richard. "It's now time for a new generation of leadership to show the way."

Starting as a Program Director in 1979, Richard was promoted to President and CEO in 1990. During his tenure, the market value of funds held at Vancouver Foundation grew from $260 million to $585 million.

"Richard provided great direction over the years," says Gerald McGavin, Vancouver Foundation Chair. "We are grateful to him for his service and wish him the best."

A true pioneer in the philanthropic sector, Richard spearheaded such philanthropic initiatives as the Four Pillars Fund, which supports community projects in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside; and the Vancouver Arts Stabilization Team (VAST), set up to help arts organizations build their organizational capacities for long term viability.

He also played a vital part in expanding Vancouver Foundation's role as a facilitator and convenor, providing advice and inspiration to the philanthropic sector and encouraging new and innovative approaches to addressing community challenges.

While Richard is staying active in the community and keeping an open mind on what the future might hold, he is very clear about his message to Vancouver Foundation donors:

"I can't speak strongly enough about how good the granting process is and how smart a decision it is to establish a fund at Vancouver Foundation," he says. "Your philanthropic dreams are in the best possible place they can be."

Helping End Violence

In today's society, violence is everywhere. It is in our homes and our schools, on the nightly news and even in our places of work. Whether we have been victims ourselves or know someone who has, there's a good chance violence has touched our lives in one form or another. From school-yard bullying to spousal abuse, violence takes many forms and has many faces. It has no cultural or economic boundaries and the impact it has on the physical and mental health of its victims can be both severe and far-reaching.

"Twenty years ago kids were having fist-fights in school; today they are using weapons, so I think the nature of violent incidences is definitely getting more severe" explains Erin Barton, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor and Executive Director of Leave Out Violence (LOVE). She adds, "It really is an issue that affects everyone."

Recognizing the need to address this growing issue, in 2004 Vancouver Foundation provided grants to help fund a variety of violence prevention initiatives, ranging from community peer support programs to family violence prevention projects.

"As a society we need to start violence education as early as possible," says Charles (Sandy) Cooke, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor and Executive Director of Covenant House Vancouver. "It's important to help young people understand what it's like to be on the receiving end of violence while at the same time trying to change the way of looking at the world for the perpetrators."

For Barton, programs that teach empowerment are key. "All of the projects Vancouver Foundation selected were about giving people either alternatives to issues of violence or ways they could empower themselves to eradicate violence from their lives," she says. "If you can create a change from the inside out, that's a change that will be sustainable. That's why these grants are so crucial."

Grant Highlights

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation, through its Advisory Committees, made several grants to organizations working in the areas of violence, including:

- Miscellaneous Productions Society: Production of E-Race, $30,000
- Downtown Eastside Youth Activities Society: Vancouver Youth Visions—Mentored Youth Peer Outreach Program, $13,200
- Justice Institute of British Columbia: Research Project to Empower Immigrant Women Who Are Victims of Intimate Violence, $39,530

DONOR PROFILE: BUSINESS OBJECTS

As a leader in the world of corporate social responsibility, Business Objects takes its role very seriously. A strong believer in strengthening local communities, in 1999 the company established a donor-advised fund at Vancouver Foundation. In a move that set them apart from other organizations, Business Objects also created volunteer employee teams to review grant applications aimed at helping to improve quality of life in communities across the Lower Mainland.

"We understand that we have a responsibility to contribute to the health of communities in which we operate and where our employees live and work," explains Tracy Logan, Director of Business Objects Community. "Given that grantmaking is not our core competency, it made sense for us to partner with Vancouver Foundation so that we could take advantage of their guidance and expertise."

In 2004, Business Objects—through their donor-advised funds—provided grants to 16 local community agencies focused on providing core curriculum and technology programs for children living in poverty. One of the groups that benefited was Leave Out Violence (LOVE)—a not-for-profit organization that reduces violence in the lives of young people.

"Our grant for LOVE's photojournalism program provided a creative way to support youth literacy and to extend our reach into another compelling cause," says Logan. "We think LOVE is a great organization tackling a tough problem and we are very proud to be associated with them through Vancouver Foundation."

NORTH ISLAND COMMUNITY SERVICES SOCIETY

For over 25 years the North Island Community Services Society has provided community members with valuable services, from young parents programs to assistance for seniors. In 2004, Vancouver Foundation's Children, Youth and Families Advisory Committee provided an $8,000 grant from the Alan and Agnes Williamson Fund for the Society's Community Peer Support Program, aimed at helping reduce violence in schools.

To reduce bullying, this peer support program provides high school students with the chance to support and encourage positive self-esteem in elementary school children with developmental and behavioral challenges.

"It's great to be able to give kids a safe place to be," comments one program participant. Program Coordinator Hiroko Sakai adds, "We've received a lot of positive feedback so far and are very thankful to Vancouver Foundation for providing the core funding. This has been a great opportunity for our community members to make a difference in the lives of local children."

Supporting Parents

It's one of the hardest and most rewarding things a person can do, yet no formal training is required. There is no pay, the hours are around the clock and the implications of decisions and actions taken now may not be known for years. Without question, being a parent is a tough job.

Science has shown that the quality of nurturing and stimulation a child receives in the first few years of life has an effect on development that lasts a lifetime. Good nutrition, stability and responsive caregiving are all critical for children to realize their full potential. But obstacles such as low socioeconomic status, personal trauma and community isolation can make it harder for some parents to provide this for their kids.

"I've never met a parent who didn't want to be a good parent and do the best they can," says Joyce Preston, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor and BC's former Child, Youth and Family Advocate. "By offering programs that help people increase their parenting skills we can cut down the need for intervention later on."

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation provided grants for a range of innovative programs across BC designed to provide parents with the skills they need to help their kids realize their full potential.

"Instead of concentrating on weaknesses, these programs try to build on a parent's strengths," says Joy Hall, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor and Program Coordinator for the Vancouver Aboriginal Early Childhood Support Program.

Parenting Programs that received funding from Vancouver Foundation in 2004 include: school-based initiatives that support parents in assisting their children to develop literacy skills; projects that provide respite care to "at-risk" young parents; home visitor programs for socially isolated families with young children; and, community-based parent peer educator training programs in rural and remote areas.

"If we want our children to grow up to be successful adults, what happens to them in the first five years of life is critical," adds Preston. "The research proves that it's a vital investment in all of our futures."

Grant Highlights

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation made several grants to organizations working in the area of parenting programs, including:

- University of British Columbia, Faculty of Education: Long-term Effects of "Roots of Empathy" on Children's Mental Health, $50,000
- Young Parents Support Network: Young Parent Families Respite Care Project, $30,000
- Mount Pleasant Family Centre Society: Strengthening Vancouver Families with Young Children, Parent Mentoring Program, $100,000

DONOR PROFILE: SEAVIEW AND HARMELINA FUNDS

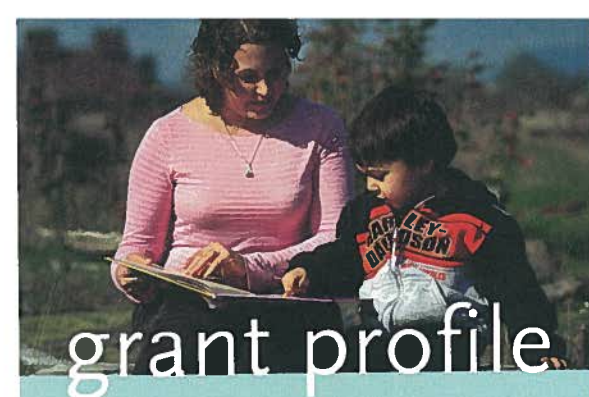

Helping organizations strengthen the bonds between parents and their children is a priority for both the Seaview and Harmelina funds, established by anonymous donors with Vancouver Foundation in 2000.

"I've been fortunate in my life and I wanted to give some of that back to the community," says the holder of the Seaview Fund, a resident of Saltspring Island and avid philanthropist.

Last year, grants from both funds were made to the Home Instruction for Parents of Pre-school Youngsters (HIPPY) program at Britannia Community Services Centre. Supported by Vancouver Foundation since 1999, HIPPY is an early childhood development program that works with parents at home to help their children develop cognitively and socially and to assist them in becoming better prepared for school. Many of the HIPPY volunteers at Britannia are parents who experienced the benefits of the program in previous years and want to help bring it to other parents in the community.

The Harmelina Fundholders, who established the fund in 2004 to recognize their wedding, have their own personal reasons for supporting parenting programs. "When my husband and I became parents, and began to experience the challenges of raising children, we wanted even more to support families in giving their children the best opportunities to grow and learn in a healthy way," says the Harmelina fundholder.

Adds the Seaview fundholder, "Programs like this are very valuable and serve to remind people that parenting, with the right tools, is a wonderful experience to be enjoyed."

ABORIGINAL HIPPY CONSORTIUM

For many years, the graduation rate among aboriginal students in British Columbia has remained low, with less than 30% completing high school. With the introduction of the Aboriginal HIPPY Consortium program in 2003, organizers are optimistic that those statistics will become a thing of the past.

The HIPPY program recognizes parents as their child's first and best teacher, empowering them to teach their children the skills they need to succeed in school. Currently delivered in five First Nations communities: Katzi, Musqueam, Tsawwassen, Sechelt and Tsleil-Waututh, the program received a grant of $60,000 from Vancouver Foundation's Early Childhood Development Legacy Fund in 2004.

"I think many of the communities that launched this program were feeling that their children were hitting the school system unprepared," says Tammy Harkey, National Manager for Aboriginal HIPPY. "HIPPY has reinforced the fact that parents do have the skills to educate their children and help them succeed."

For Tsawwassen First Nation Chief Kim Baird, the benefits of participation in the program are clear: "Investing in our children needs to start as early as possible to ensure their success in the public school system," she says. "I am looking forward to enrolling my own daughter, to ensure she has every advantage as she grows up."

Building Literacy

Imagine a world where reading to your child is a difficult experience and the simple task of filling out a job application is unthinkable. For the over 40% of Canadian adults who have weak literary skills, this world is a harsh reality.

Statistics speak volumes about the economic and social impact of literacy levels in Canada: 20% of high school graduates lack the literacy skills necessary to access post-secondary learning, Canadians with low literacy skills have higher rates of unemployment, and less than 10% of Canadians who could benefit from literacy programs are being helped. (Sources: Literacy BC, Statistics Canada)

"Literacy is a key component of how we communicate," explains Enzo Guerriero, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor and Executive Director of the Britannia Community Services Centre Society. "If a significant portion of our population is illiterate, it not only has a major impact on us economically but it also has a huge impact on individuals emotionally. It's probably the number one issue that relates to societal success."

Grant Highlights

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation, through its Education Advisory Committee, made several grants to organizations working in areas of literacy, including:

- Lower Similkameen Community Services Society: Family Literacy Outreach—Reader's Theatre, $5,580
- Abbotsford School District: Literacy Initiatives—Inner City School Support, $65,000
- Britannia Support Society: Youth in Transition Family Literacy Program, $31,400

Programs that provide families with literacy resources are a crucial part of the puzzle. "If parents have weak literacy skills, that affects their ability to do early cognitive work with their children," says Leona Gadsby, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor and Executive Director of the Columbia Basin Alliance for Literacy. "What happens to a person in childhood within the context of the family has a big influence on how well they do in the rest of their life."

For First Nations and multicultural populations, this also means building literacy in their own languages and cultural traditions, resulting in improved well-being and closer connections to their roots.

In an effort to support literacy work, Vancouver Foundation provided a wide array of grants in 2004 to projects across the province. "There's a whole range of literacy programs out there that play an important role not only in language development but also in cultural development," says Guerriero. "They would be lost without Vancouver Foundation's support."

DONOR PROFILE: MARY STEWART

Giving children and adults the tools to read and write effectively has always been important to Vancouver Foundation fundholder Mary Stewart. An avid reader and active community member, Mrs. Stewart provided grants to three literacy-based initiatives last year—One to One Literacy Society, Literacy BC Society and Carnegie Community Centre Association—through the Stewart Fund, one of two donor advised funds she created at Vancouver Foundation.

Established in 1973, the Stewart Fund provides support to charitable organizations across the province that work in the areas of conservation, education, welfare and the arts. "The people at Vancouver Foundation are the experts so I rely on them to decide where the money goes," says Mrs. Stewart. "Because I've always had a keen interest in literacy, I make sure that a portion of grants from my fund go to helping organizations working in that area."

In 2004, the Stewart Fund provided 21 grants to organizations across the province, ranging from Covenant House Vancouver to the Belfry Theatre Society. After her husband's death from Alzheimer's in 1990, Mrs. Stewart set up her second donor advised fund with Vancouver Foundation—the Alzheimer's Disease Research Fund.

TLINGIT FAMILY LEARNING CENTRE

At the Tlingit Family Learning Centre in Atlin, BC, preserving the cultural traditions and language of the Tlingit First Nations people takes top priority. Founded to empower and strengthen low-income families in the local community, in 2004 the Centre received assistance in the form of a $40,000 grant from Vancouver Foundation's Children, Youth and Families Advisory Committee for their Culture, Language and Nutrition Program.

The program not only provides children with valuable Tlingit language, literacy and cultural skills, but it also helps prepare them academically and socially for school entry. The result for the children and their families is greater self-esteem and self-respect—two vital components for building a healthy and emotionally strong community.

"At our Christmas concert this year, the preschool children put on a fabulous show in both Tlingit and English that was a great success," says Program Coordinator Lois Lemke. "Thanks to their language teacher, Lorraine Dawson, the kids have learned valuable communications skills. The Tlingit language is at high risk of extinction, which is another reason why Vancouver Foundation's support is so invaluable."

Breaking Dependence

People with addictions come from a variety of backgrounds, communities and social groups yet are among the most marginalized members of society, plagued with a host of problems ranging from chronic disease to social isolation. According to recent statistics, one in four British Columbians will experience a substance use problem at some point in their lives. From alcohol dependency to drug abuse, the impact of addictions on individuals, families and communities across Canada is immeasurable.

Vancouver Foundation has long recognized the need to support organizations working with addictions in British Columbia. Most recently, in 2003, they established the Four Pillars Fund in partnership with the City of Vancouver, Western Economic Diversification and VanCity Credit Union. The Fund provides grants for community initiatives that address addictions using the "Four Pillars" approach—prevention, treatment, enforcement and harm reduction.

"People need to realize that addiction is primarily a health and social issue, not a criminal one," explains Donald MacPherson, a Vancouver Foundation volunteer advisor for the Four Pillars Fund and Drug Policy Coordinator for the City of Vancouver. "What the Committee hopes to do is support a range of interventions that work towards preventing harm, saving lives and building healthier communities."

Recognizing the need for a coordinated community approach is one large piece of the puzzle. "Everyone has a role to play in dealing with the issue of addiction, including the business community, police, health care system and government," says MacPherson, adding, "Vancouver Foundation is committed to supporting action-oriented solutions. That's what inspired me to get involved with the Four Pillars Fund."

From peer network programs to problematic substance use dialogue sessions, Vancouver Foundation provided grants to support a variety of addiction centred initiatives in 2004. "If you give $30,000 or $40,000 to a project, you can add a significant component to it or help make it sustainable," says MacPherson. "The energy that results from these grants is what makes them work."

Grant Highlights

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation made several grants to organizations working in the area of addictions, including:

- SFU, Morris J. Wosk Centre For Dialogue: Substance Misuse Prevention Dialogues: From Community Participation to Action Strategy, $20,000
- Society for the Advancement of Marginalized Persons: Creating a VANDU Journal, $5,000

DONOR PROFILE: FOUR CORNERS BANK

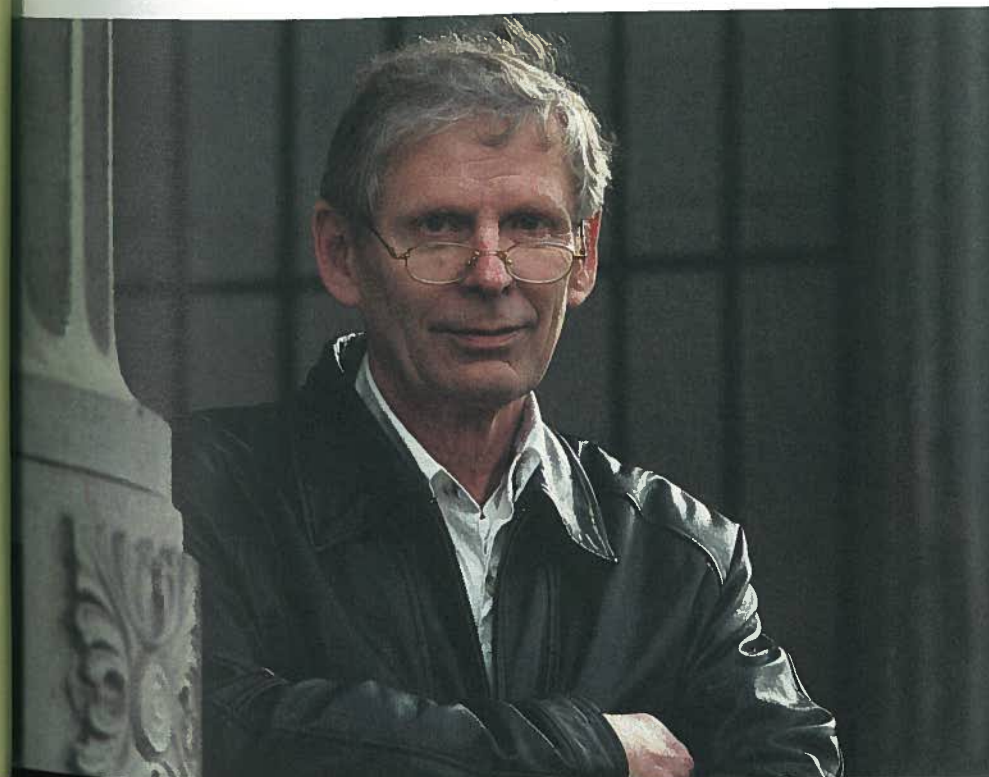

"Community spirit". For the Board and Advisory Committee members of the Four Corners Bank, these words hold special meaning.

For many years, they refused to accept payment for attending Board and Committee meetings. Instead, they donated the money to the Four Corners Support Fund Society, established to provide micro-loans to community residents in the Downtown Eastside. When the bank stopped offering loans and subsequently closed in 2004, the money collected—approximately $80,000—was donated to Vancouver Foundation's Four Pillars Fund.

"With the closing of the Four Corners Bank, the Society no longer had the ability to provide loans to local residents so we had to find other ways to make an effective contribution," explains Peter Fairchild, the Society's Treasurer. "Vancouver Foundation had the history, the credibility, the management expertise and the track record in supporting community-based initiatives we were looking for. When the Four Pillars Fund was announced, we knew it was a perfect fit."

In 2004, the Four Pillars Fund provided grants to two organizations working in the areas of addictions, including the Downtown Eastside's Watari Research Association. As the fund grows, grants will be made to projects based in the Downtown Eastside that are of benefit to that community.

Peter Fairchild, Treasurer of the Four Corners Support Fund Society.

WATARI RESEARCH ASSOCIATION

Providing innovative services to help improve the lives of at-risk children, youth, families and communities is the mission of the Watari Research Association. In 2004 the Association received a $20,000 grant from Vancouver Foundation's Four Pillars Fund Advisory Committee for the development of the Crystal Clear Peer Support Training Program.

This unique training and outreach program is designed to help one of Vancouver's hardest to reach populations—street-involved youth who use methamphetamine. As part of the project, eight youth between the ages of 17 and 24 are provided with 3 months of training and support on the issues of methamphetamine use, giving them the skills to become peer educators and outreach workers.

For participants, the program's success lies in its flexible, open approach. "The Crystal Clear project accepted me when other programs wouldn't," says Amber, a 21-year-old methamphetamine user. "We decide what harm reduction information and training is valuable to us and what our goals are. That's what makes the program so rewarding."

Inspiring Dialogue

Creating opportunities for the exchange of ideas is an essential part of the community foundation movement. Vancouver Foundation has always played a lead role in facilitating a range of programs, events and dialogue sessions on some of the most complex and urgent issues facing British Columbians. As Canada's largest community foundation, it is committed to finding innovative and meaningful ways to engage both its constituents and the public.

The insights gained from these community-based forums are invaluable. Not only do the lessons that emerge play a role in shaping the Foundation's strategic priorities and grantmaking decisions, but each discussion also helps to promote partnerships, encourage public debate and raise the profile of important socio-economic trends.

Grant Highlights

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation convened a range of programs, events and dialogue sessions on a variety of issues important to British Columbians, including:

CHILDREN, YOUTH AND FAMILIES: Coalition for Kids is a broad, citywide coalition of area service networks, advocacy organizations and community agencies established to build a community based vision for Vancouver's children, youth and families. In April 2004, Vancouver Foundation convened the first in a series of meetings with members of this diverse group to discuss the key issues facing both youth and the not-for-profit sector in Vancouver. As a result of the discussions a series of community initiatives were established, including youth rights workshops, community dialogue, and community-based rights monitoring projects.

ANIMAL WELFARE: In September, Vancouver Foundation convened a meeting with 30 local animal rescue and sanctuary groups. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the Foundation's involvement in developing a technical assistance program for BC's Animal Welfare sector. Once established, the program will help the Foundation meet the needs of this growing sector by assisting animal rescue and sanctuary groups to increase their capacity and ability to respond to their community.

"One of the Foundation's most important functions is that of convenor," says Dr. Judith Hall, Vancouver Foundation Board Member and Chair of the Children, Youth and Families Advisory Committee. "In order for the Foundation to be effective in our communities, we have to understand the issues shaping them and talk to the people involved. As a neutral player, we're able to identify what the issues really are."

"For us, convening is about the power of networking and sharing resources," adds John Binsted, Vancouver Foundation's Vice President and COO. "We convene at the neighbourhood level, among community agency groups and at the provincial level. It's an integral part of building community capacity by strengthening networks within communities."

DONOR PROFILE: DONNA-MAE MOORE

Vancouver Foundation fundholder Donna-Mae Moore believes in the power of convening. A dedicated philanthropist, Mrs. Moore has worked closely with the Foundation since 1995. For her, convening is one of the Foundation's most necessary and vital functions.

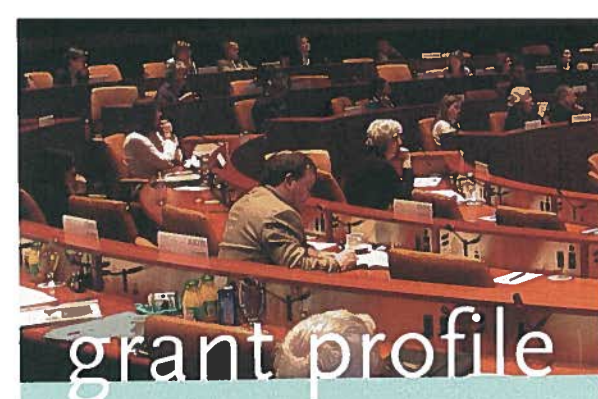

"Vancouver Foundation enjoys an excellent reputation of long standing, is known to be consistently non-partisan, and is widely recognized within the community and province it serves," says Moore. "That places it in an ideal position to act as a convenor, bringing groups and individuals together to work towards common objectives."

Mrs. Moore currently holds three donor-advised endowment funds at Vancouver Foundation: an animal welfare fund established in 1995, a fund established in 2001 for humanitarian purposes, and a medical research fund established in 2004.

"My late husband and I placed our trust in Vancouver Foundation in perpetuity because of their decades of responsible financial management and conscientious distribution of income as intended by donors," adds Moore.

"Their approach is dignified and their record distinguished."

DIALOGUE SERIES PROFILE

In November 2004, 120 individuals from community organizations, local businesses, universities and government agencies gathered at Simon Fraser University's Morris J. Wosk Centre for Dialogue to share ideas on the complex relationship between cities and rural populations in the province.

This day-long event was the second in Vancouver Foundation's Community Dialogue Series—a series of four engaging sessions established to examine key social and demographic trends currently shaping British Columbia.

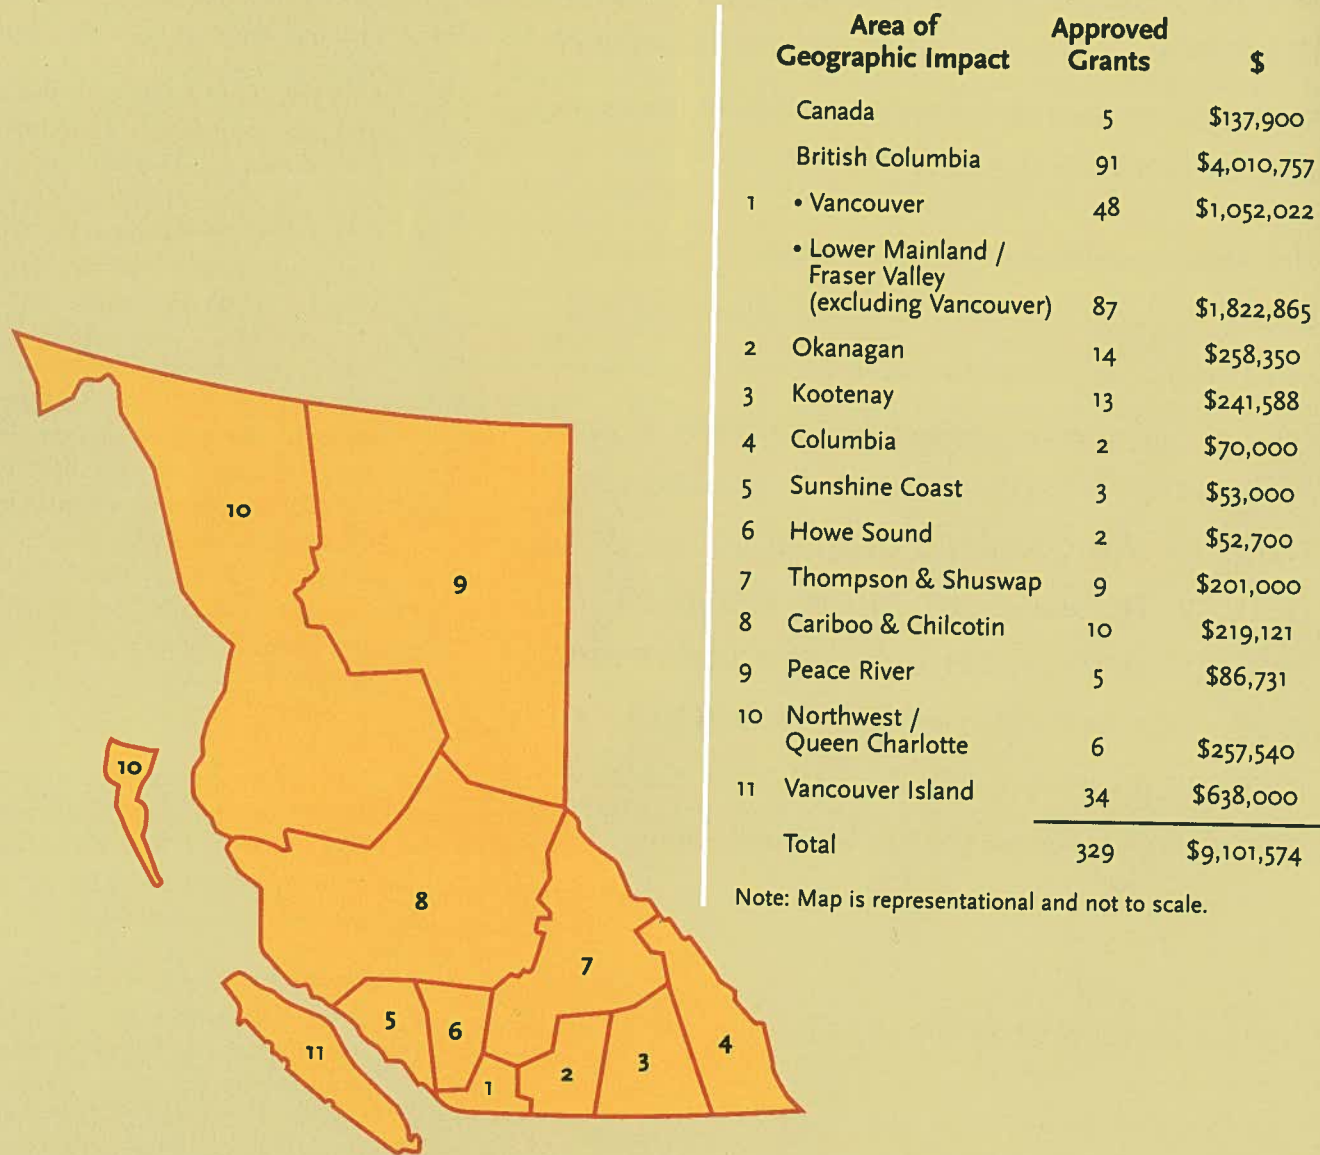

Established by the Foundation in partnership with the Centre for Dialogue, the annual sessions foster dialogue and establish networking opportunities among a diverse range of individuals and organizations. The sessions also allow Vancouver Foundation to draw on the insights and lessons that emerge with a view to informing its grantmaking policies and plans.

"I'm very excited that Vancouver Foundation is playing a part in this," says Judith Hall. "By being open and listening, we will come up with some fabulous ideas and directions."

The first dialogue in the series took place in October 2003 and dealt with immigration and migration issues in British Columbia. In 2005 and 2006, the series will explore the critical issues surrounding First Nations and Aging Populations.

Geographic Impact of Grants Approved by Advisory Committees

Although the name may suggest a limited geographic area, Vancouver Foundation serves the entire province of British Columbia, awarding many of its Unrestricted and Field of Interest grants to communities outside the Lower Mainland. In order to remain responsive to the needs of the communities, approximately one third of the volunteer advisors who review and approve grants are from other BC localities. It is often the case that grants are awarded in one area but have a farther reaching impact. Below is a list that describes the geographical impact of Vancouver Foundation grants approved in 2004.

As one of the fastest growing sectors in philanthropy today, community foundations are dedicated to improving communities in local geographic areas. In British Columbia there is a network of more than 40 community foundations.

Establishing an Endowment Fund with Vancouver Foundation

Vancouver Foundation helps individuals, families, corporations and not-for-profit organizations create their own philanthropic legacy through the establishment of endowment funds.

The minimum amount needed to establish a fund at Vancouver Foundation is $10,000. However, with as little as $1,000, individuals can create a start-up fund and continue contributing for as long as ten years until they reach the $10,000 needed to formally establish the fund.

Vancouver Foundation charges an annual fee equal to 0.33% of the fund's market value to administer the fund and each fund shares a proportionate cost of the investment management expense, which is approximately 0.42%. Added together, the total annual fee charged against a basic fund invested in the Consolidated Trust Fund is only 0.75% - one of the lowest fees of any foundation or financial institution in Canada.

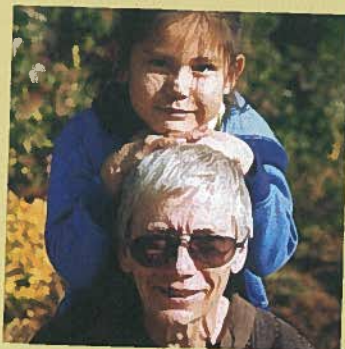

TYPES OF ENDOWMENT FUNDS AND MAKING GRANTS

Vancouver Foundation administers almost 900 endowment funds that are prudently invested to ensure protection of the capital. Each year a portion of the income earned is granted to not-for-profit organizations. The process for distribution of these grants is guided by the terms contained in the Deed of Gift (the trust agreement) governing the fund, agreed to by the donor and Vancouver Foundation before the fund is established. There are several ways in which distributions are made:

Unrestricted Funds / Field of Interest Funds

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation's volunteer Advisory Committees made 335 grants totaling $9.9 million. Most of these grants were made possible through Unrestricted and Field of Interest funds administered by the Foundation. The flexibility and broad purposes of these funds allowed for the support of a diverse range of charitable projects throughout British Columbia.

All grant applications undergo a rigorous assessment process before receiving final approval. First, Vancouver Foundation staff review the request for funding. Then, a volunteer advisory committee with the appropriate expertise and knowledge evaluates the request and makes a recommendation to the Foundation's Board of Directors. In the final stage, the Board reviews the recommendation and approves funding. By enlisting community volunteers who are experts in their field to serve on our advisory committees and Board, Vancouver Foundation can recognize emerging trends and respond strategically to community needs.

Donor Advised Funds

With a donor advised fund, a donor can provide advice and recommendations as to the Foundation regarding grants made from their fund. Advised fund holders may:

- provide Vancouver Foundation with written advice in support of one or more particular charities;
- change their written advice as often or as seldom as they like;
- receive assistance from Foundation staff in selecting charitable projects for support; or
- choose to support a grant that has been approved through one of the Foundation's advisory committees.

Agency Funds

Registered charities may also establish endowment funds with Vancouver Foundation to assist their organizations. Distributions from these funds provide agency fundholders with a stable stream of income on a long-term basis.

INVESTMENT OPTIONS

Vancouver Foundation's investments are overseen by an Investment Committee with four key objectives: to establish an overall investment policy for the funds; to monitor fund performance; to appoint or remove external investment managers; and, to ensure appropriate annual reporting.

Vancouver Foundation offers several investment options:

Consolidated Trust Fund

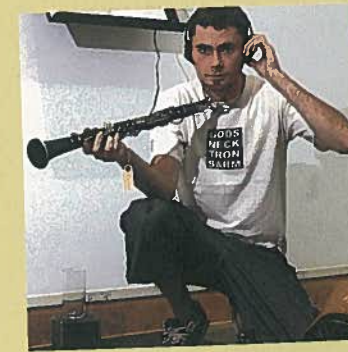

The combined capital of Vancouver Foundation's assets are invested in a pooled fund called the Consolidated Trust Fund (CTF). Each of the funds held at the Foundation holds units within the CTF. It consists of stocks, bonds and money market investments currently totaling more than $600 million.

Socially Responsible Investment Fund

New fund holders have the option of selecting a socially responsible investment equity portfolio, which is referred to as the Socially Responsible Investment Fund (SRIF). To address our donors' increased interest in values-based investing, this fund excludes investments in corporations having a harmful effect on the environment, engaged in weapons manufacturing or tobacco production, or whose business contributes to third world exploitation or human rights violations.

Investment Managers Program

The Investment Managers Program allows donors to establish a fund with Vancouver Foundation with the involvement of their investment manager. The investment manager can select the assets in which the donor wants to invest, as long as those assets meet Vancouver Foundation's quality criteria. This special investment management arrangement is available to donors who are contemplating establishing funds with an initiating capital of $500,000.

Supporting your Community

Supporting Your Community is the first Canadian program of its kind, bringing together the investment expertise of BMO Financial Group with the charitable knowledge of community foundations across Canada. With a minimum donation of $25,000, a BMO client can participate in the program. Supporting Your Community helps donors formalize their giving and provides them with the charitable and financial advice to help maximize the impact of their donation in the community.

SPECIAL FUND OPTIONS

Vancouver Foundation is always looking for new ways to serve our donors better. Following is a list of special fund options offered by Vancouver Foundation:

Pay Down (Annuity) Funds

Pay Down (Annuity) funds are an alternative to a permanent fund where the donor wants to focus their community support within a fixed time period. After an initial holding period, all of the capital and income will be distributed over a set time frame—15 years for example. This fund option does not apply to registered charities.

Retractable Funds

Retractable funds are available to any registered charity that wishes to retain the ability to access the capital of their fund under certain conditions. The terms on which retractions may occur need to be carefully negotiated on a case-by-case basis as each charity's needs are unique.

Private Funds

Many philanthropists are motivated to create private foundations. Recognizing that private foundations require substantial amounts of time and resources to establish and operate, Vancouver Foundation offers private funds as an alternative. Private funds allow the donor to be involved in the grantmaking process as with a donor advised fund. In addition, this type of fund offers other services including research, marketing, specialized application forms, and a unique web page. Both private foundations seeking the assistance of Vancouver Foundation and existing donor advised fund holders are eligible to establish a private fund if their capital assets meet the minimum fund size of $1,000,000.

Establishing a fund with Vancouver Foundation is a simple and rewarding process. Our staff would be happy to work with you and your advisors to help you realize your philanthropic dreams. Please contact us for more information about making a donation or establishing a fund.

Applying for a Grant

Vancouver Foundation supports a wide range of projects that are of benefit to British Columbians. Funded activities often provide a direct service to the community, or take an innovative approach to a community concern.

To apply, your organization must be a federally registered charity, and must submit a letter of inquiry outlining the proposed project. One of our Program Directors will review your proposal to determine basic eligibility. If the project qualifies, you will be invited to submit a formal application. The Advisory Committee considers your application and makes a recommendation to the Foundation's Board of Directors. If approved, you will receive written notification of the Board's decision, along with terms and conditions of the grant. For further details, please visit www.vancouverfoundation.bc.ca.

We also wish to acknowledge the following individuals who have advised Vancouver Foundation that they are planning to leave a future gift through their estates.

REGISTERED SAVINGS PLANS (RRSP'S & RRIF'S)

One of the easiest ways to create a legacy through your estate is by designating Vancouver Foundation as a beneficiary of your RRSP or RRIF. Completing a short form provided by one's financial advisor is all that is needed. The following individuals have advised Vancouver Foundation that they have designated the Foundation as a beneficiary under their RRSPs and RRIFs.

Mary C. Jordan
Dr. Shirley M. Wong

FUTURE BEQUESTS

Gifts in a Will are the most common way that individuals provide for a future gift to Vancouver Foundation. The Foundation works with many lawyers and notaries to ensure that the wording used in the Will is appropriate to carry out a donor's wishes. LISTS

Every effort has been made to ensure that these lists are accurate. If a name has been omitted or misspelled, please accept our apologies and let us know so we can correct our records.

ANONYMOUS

Vancouver Foundation also recognizes and extends appreciation to the many contributors who wish to remain anonymous.

ENDOWMENT FUNDS

Vancouver Foundation is here to help donors, corporations and not-for-profit organizations create their own philanthropic legacies by establishing endowment funds. Donors can choose from different types of endowment funds that are prudently invested by Vancouver Foundation. The capital of these permanent funds is held and only the income is granted to not-for-profit organizations, ensuring continued support for the community year after year.

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation established 55 new endowment funds bringing the total number of funds under administration to almost 900. The following is a list of these endowment funds.

UNRESTRICTED FUNDS

In 2004, Vancouver Foundation's Advisory Committees approved 330 grants totaling $9 million. Most of these grants were made possible through unrestricted or field of interest funds administered by Vancouver Foundation. The flexibility and broad purposes of these funds allows the Foundation to support a diverse range of charitable projects across the province.

Vancouver Foundation Grants - Discretionary and Donor Advised

Discretionary grants are awarded after assessments by Vancouver Foundation staff and careful review by a volunteer Advisory Committee. There is one Advisory Committee for each field of interest and committees are comprised of informed community representatives who are widely experienced in a particular field of interest. Most of these discretionary grants are made possible through Unrestricted or Field of Interest funds administered by Vancouver Foundation. The flexibility and broad purposes of these funds allows the Foundation to support a diverse range of charitable projects.

Grants from Donor Advised Funds are based on recommendations Vancouver Foundation receives from donor advised fundholders.

Distribution of Income from Designated Funds

Income from Designated Funds is directed to specific organizations or allocated to other endowment funds named by a Fundholder. Designated Funds may be initiated by individuals or corporations but are often started by not-for-profit organizations, who add contributions to their own fund to provide stable funding on a long-term basis. Also included in this category are community foundations, from which income is returned to a particular community.
